Appel à communications : « Lois et politiques concernant la restitution des biens culturels saisis pendant le contrôle colonial ou l'invasion étrangère (du XIXe au milieu du XXe) »

LE 15 JUIN 2019

Forum will be held in Beijing on October 24, 2019

En tant que patrimoine commun de l'humanité, le patrimoine culturel a été valorisé et strictement protégé par la plupart des pays à l'époque contemporaine, donnant ainsi naissance à cette nouvelle discipline qu'est le droit du patrimoine culturel.

Call for Papers

Laws and Policies for the Return of Cultural Property taken during the Colonial Control or Foreign Invasion (19th ~mid-20th Century)

As common heritage of mankind, cultural heritage has been valued and strictly protected by most countries in contemporary times, and thus has spawned a new discipline of cultural heritage law.

In order to foster international exchanges and cooperation in this field and attract scholars, students, heritage administrators and practitioners domestically and abroad to pay more attention to the legal protection of cultural heritage, to promote the construction and development of this new discipline, Law School of Renmin University of China (RUC), in conjunction with three foreign law schools of Toulouse 1 Capitole University (UT1), University of Technology Sydney (UTS) and University of Kent (KENT), jointly initiated the RUC-UT1-UTS-KENT Forum on Cultural Heritage law, which consists of a series of international seminars held in turn in the four law schools. Hosted by Renmin Law School, the First Seminar of the RUC-UT1-UTS-KENT Forum will be held in Beijing on October 24, 2019. Scholars, administrators and practitioners in the field of legal protection of cultural heritage in Australia, China, France and the UK will be invited to discuss the key issues involved in the Return of cultural property taken during foreign invasion in modern times. Participants domestically and abroad are invited to contribute to the discussion by submitting papers.
